

Press Release-11/5/05-Cincinnati, Ohio- RISE Learning Solutions hired Central Satellite Services to uplink a distance learning project.

The nationally recognized program was produced by RISE for Pre-K Now. Pre-K Now is a public education and advocacy organization that advances high-quality, voluntary pre-kindergarten for all three and four year olds. Through its various projects Pre-K Now supports state-based children's advocates; educates policymakers about the need for pre-k; and raises public awareness about the need for pre-k for all children.

RISE Learning Solutions produced the program in their Woodlawn, Ohio studios. The program was hosted by Libby Doggett, Pre-K Now Executive Director, and featured in-studio discussion with other pre-k experts, telephone interaction with audience members at the downlink sites and video packages.

Dana Hammonds, Executive Producer for RISE said that she "...found the CentralSat to be extremely knowledgeable, resourceful and willing to help with any need that arose. Their services always came in within budget and in fact, they often provided more services than were billed. They were there to assist with the project from day one, answering any questions I had and offering their professional advice on the best ways to handle my satellite needs."

Jim Timmerman, Operations Manager for Central Satellite Services, directed the program as well. "We were honored to work on this project. To be the satellite provider for this nationally recognized distance learning company is quite a feather in our cap.
