Press Release-2/1/09-Cincinnati, OH- Central Satellite Service to provide exclusive satellite services for 2009 Oxford International Film Festival.

"We're thrilled to be associated with such an exciting event" said Jim Timmerman, Operations Manager for Central Satellite Services(CentralSat). He went on to say, "The OIFF is quickly becoming one of the Midwest's largest and fastest-growing international film events. This year television stations and national networks will be able to do live interviews with the hundreds of filmmakers, industry professionals and celebrities using CentralSat."

"We're delighted to be working with CentralSat this year, it's a wonderful opportunity to reach audiences live, both regionally, nationally and even internationally, right from our main event site" commented JC Schroeder, Executive Director of the 2009 OIFF.

The OIFF, July 23-26, 2009 will feature over 100 of the best new short and feature-length independent films from around the globe each year, amidst 4 days of screenings, workshops, concerts, filmmaker panels, parties, receptions and galas.

Satellite technology remains the standard for real time high quality audio and video communications. More and more companies are realizing this everyday. CentralSat uplink trucks allow companies the opportunity to originate their message from any location: corporate boardroom, hotel ballroom, factory floor or in the middle of a cornfield.

About Central Satellite Services:

Central Satellite Services, LLC operates KU-Band satellite uplink trucks from the national headquarters located in Cincinnati, Ohio.
